Negro Cooks Also Urged to See Mrs. Ihrig's Demonstrations

Absolutely Free
All matinees are suspended at the Publix-Saenger theatre through Friday afternoon, while the Star's Free Cooking School is in session under direction of Mrs. Leona Rusk Ihrig. There is no admission price, or any charge whatsoever. The Star is paying all expenses of the school, but has 30 merchants and manufacturers of national foods co-operating in its advertising columns.
The negro balcony of the Saenger is open as usual to negroes, and negro cooks are particularly urged to attend the daily sessions at 2 o'clock, when Mrs. Ihrig demonstrates the newest recipes in her model kitchen on the Saenger stage.

A crowd 50 per cent larger than that on the opening day, appeared for Tuesday's session of The Star's Free Cooking School at the Publix-Saenger theatre.

Starting promptly at 2 o'clock, Mrs. Ihrig began her demonstrations of luncheon day recipes, including such features as frozen salmon loaf, French dressing, full meal salad, spinach mould and shrimp saute.
Wednesday will be party day, with recipes as the feature attractions. Manager Matt Fries has the Saenger in full dress for the cooking school, this week marking the opening of the Spring Jubilee for the Publix theatres all over the United States. Hal Shelly in "Men Are Like That," the green velvet of the stage play, "The Girl of the Year," is the attraction tonight, with a stage show of negro singers in spirituals and folk songs, directed by Professor Yerger. Wednesday and Thursday, Greta Garbo appears in her first talking picture, "Anna Christie." All theatre programs begin immediately after the house is cleared following the cooking school's close, at 5 o'clock each afternoon.

Would Enlarge Grain Elevator

Contract Let by Missouri Pacific Lines For Addition

ST. LOUIS, April 1.—Contract has been let by the Missouri Pacific Lines to the Edwin Alsop company of Chicago for a 2,076 bushel addition to its elevator in St. Louis, according to announcement made by C. E. Perkins, vice president in charge of traffic. The addition will cost approximately $700,000 and will bring the total investment of the elevator to $2,700,000 and increase its capacity approximately 4,076 bushels.
The present elevator was constructed in 1923 at a cost of $2,700,000, including buildings, trucks, yards and value of site, and has a capacity of 2,000,000 bushels.
Work will start this week and will be rushed in view of completing the structure by August 1, in order to accommodate 1930 wheat. Mr. Perkins explained the ever-increasing flow of grain drawn through the St. Louis gateway by the Missouri Pacific line, as well as the fact that the present storage facilities are taxed by the surplus wheat held here, makes construction of the addition necessary.
The addition will be of most modern fireproof design of concrete and steel and will harmonize in appearance with the existing structure.

Loss Attributed to Unemployment

Report Reveals 3,700,000 Wage Earners Without Work

WASHINGTON, April 1.—(AP)—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, estimated today before a senate committee that 3,700,000 wage earners were out of work in February losing approximately $4,000,000 in pay envelopes.
Green was the first witness called before the commerce committee to turn in consideration of the unemployment question. He said the first three months of this year that wage earners lost $1,000,000,000. He explained this estimate on losses based on the theory of men standing idle might have created more than $1,000,000,000 in wealth. The country as a whole as well as the unemployed men is poorer because the wage earner not employed did not produce work which affected the whole country," Green asserted.
Officials nominated last February and elected today will take office at the meeting of the city council the third Tuesday in the month, April 15. The last meeting of the old city council will be held tonight, when bills for March will be presented, and other business transacted.

He rode 10 miles and crossed a river to get Lemon Pie like this

I CALL this "Matty's Lemon Pie" because a man from Missouri told me it was as good as that made by an old colored cook named Matty—and he once rode 10 miles on horseback and rowed a mile across the Missouri River just to eat her lemon pie.

"Matty's Pie" is just sweet enough—with an overtone of fresh, plump fruit, crowned with a meringue, browned to a golden glow and served in a Crisco pastry shell, as crisp on the bottom as it is around the edge—as only Crisco pastry can be.

MATTY'S LEMON PIE

- 1 lemon, juice and grated rind
- 1 cup granulated sugar
- 1 orange, juice and pulp
- 1/2 cup Crisco
- 2 egg yolks, beaten light
- 2 tablespoons Crisco
- 3 tablespoons cornstarch
- 1 1/2 cups water

Beat egg yolks light and stir in mixed dry ingredients. Add liquids, lemon rind and Crisco. Cook in double boiler until thick. Cool. Pour into baked shell. Cover with meringue (2 egg whites beaten stiff blended with 1 tablespoon granulated sugar and 1 teaspoon lemon juice). Brown in moderate oven (350° F.) for 15 minutes.

FLAKIER PIE-CRUST (and a short cut)

If you haven't made pie-crust with Crisco, you've yet to discover how really tender and flaky pie-crust can be. Sweet-tasting, too, because Crisco tastes sweet and pure all by itself—and comes to you fresh in an air-tight can.

To save time in pie baking you can keep this pastry dough, already mixed, in the ice-box and bake a crust just when you need it. It will stay sweet, because Crisco itself stays sweet. And the thorough chilling will make the crust even flakier than usual.

2 cups flour 2 cups Crisco 1/2 cup salt 6 to 8 tablespoons cold water

Sift flour and salt together. Cut Crisco in with two knives until consistency of small peas. Add only enough water to hold mixture together. Roll 1/4 inch thick on floured board.

For baked shell, use half of recipe and cover inverted pie plate with pastry. Leave enough dough to fold back to make a firm edge. Prick well with fork to prevent bubbles. Bake in hot oven (450° F.) 15 minutes.

For two-crust pie, bake 10 minutes at 450° F., then reduce heat to moderate (350° F.); bake until filling is done.

ALL MEASUREMENTS LEVEL. Recipes tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Institute. Crisco is the registered trade-mark of a shortening manufactured by The Procter & Gamble Co.

©1936, P. & G. Co.

Use Crisco—then any other shortening. Crisco's sweet, fresh flavor will tell you why things made with Crisco taste so much better.

SHOWER SPRINGS

Seems like the north pole has moved south a few miles. Those that had radishes to pull sure did have a cold job and didn't get anything for their work. If those that plant radishes would just plant what they could gather and not plant so many we would get a better price and the people wouldn't lose. The watermelon market will be like the radish market if everybody planted a large patch. The farmers plant every acre they can work and get worked and grumble if they don't get a fancy price. The buyers know that they can buy truck cheap when a large crop is raised.

We Must Live With Ourselves

ROMANCE that was stranger than fiction came clattering over the newspaper telegraph wires just at edition time the other day. Dispatches from far-off Austria brought the news that Dr. Ernest Watzl and his pretty secretary, with whom he had eloped had been found dead in a Vienna hotel, victims of a suicide pact.

The "plot" was one that would drive an author or a movie scenario writer into ecstasies. Dr. Ernest Watzl, prominent Cleveland, Ohio, chemist, artist and clubman, disappeared mysteriously last fall on business trip to Philadelphia. His wrecked and burned auto found in rural Pennsylvania, footprints leading therefrom to a nearby river several thousand dollars in his pocket, theories of robbery and murder, mystery, oblivion, and then evidence hinting that Dr. Watzl still lived.

Next, the subsequent and equally mysterious disappearance of Dr. Watzl's pretty young secretary and art model, and she was married, too, leaving a husband just as he had left a wife, and her young husband's suit for divorce.

Months, and no trace of either of them... hints that they were in South America... where they could be alone together... strange rumors that both were dead... mystery seemingly impenetrable, utterly baffling.

And then the discovery of two bodies in a Vienna hotel, a middle-aged man and a pretty girl... bullets from an Austrian army revolver through the hearts of each, notes left behind to identify them, letters explaining the futility of their ill-starred romance to their friends back home.

Dead in each other's arms, four thousand miles from home... a climax to a tragic adventure in defiance of convention.

THIS story was its own editorial. It needed no embellishment to present a conclusion or point a moral. Such was already there.

Dr. Watzl and this girl fled 4000 miles to be alone. They wanted to be free, to get away from others.

They did get away from others, yes—but they found a far more vigilant companion hounded them wherever they went. They could not get away from themselves.

After all, conscience is the most relentless of our tormentors—and, remorse the most cruel of all tyrants.

We can flee from others. But we cannot escape living with ourselves.

The Naval Holiday

THE suggestion for a six-months holiday in the naval disarmament conference may turn out to be a life-saver for the proponents of naval reduction and world peace.

It is disappointing, of course, when we recall the high hopes that we had when the conference opened. But it is becoming apparent that our hopes were unjustifiably exalted. We expected more than we had any right to expect.

There have been plenty of chances for the conference to end in something very like a row, with all kinds of ill-feeling engendered on all sides. The six-months holiday might avert those chances. It might pave the way for real naval reduction later.

To be sure, it isn't nearly as good as what we expected. But it's perhaps the best way out of a very difficult situation.

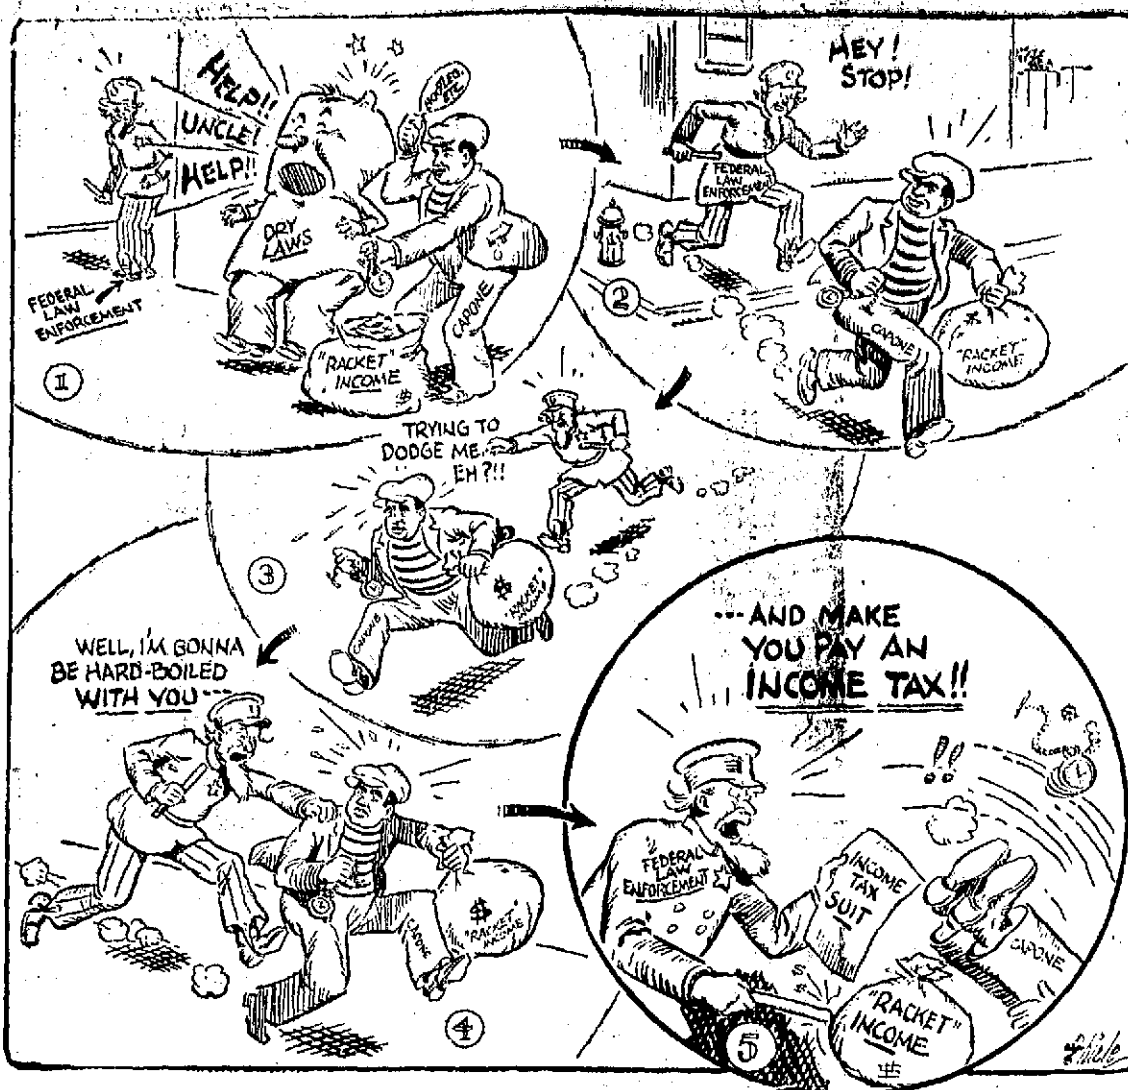

A Tip to the Married

Words of advice in regard to marriage there is no end. Of it, no doubt, dates all the way back to Adam and most of it, just as indubitably, always has been. Days will be disregarded; but it does no harm to add two to the general total now and then, anyway.

Latest comes from Judge Samuel Harrison of Evans, who has married 900 couples during his period in office. He offers many bits of advice; his best, we think, is to love your partner seventy times seven, and then give him the account book.

A happily-married couple can tell you the value of the account book. It is a valuable stand-by when bought dry, by the pound, and properly cooked. These beans

WASHINGTON—Thus far, the senatorial primary in Pennsylvania has stirred up more general interest in Washington than the other forthcoming senatorial primaries put together.

It's easy to see why. Senator Joe Grundy, who has had more notoriety in this last year of tariff history than any other senator, will seek the nomination against a member of the Hoover cabinet, Secretary of Labor James J. Davis. The figure of Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury and a great power in Pennsylvania politics, stands in the background—behind Grundy, incidentally. And even President Hoover gets dragged in because Davis has decided to campaign while remaining in the cabinet—where his position is a valuable item of political capital—and because pressure is sure to be brought on Hoover to persuade Davis to resign.

There is also Bill Vare of Philadelphia, the country's most famous political boss and hero of a long and sensational battle to win a seat in the Senate, who will support Davis. And the fact that Pennsylvania politics, always so fragrant, have been aired in these last few years to the extent that nearly everyone who reads the newspapers knows something about them.

One thing is perfectly clear about this Davis-Grundy contest. The most important asset Davis has is the widespread objection to Grundy. Aside from such purely physical assets as the Vare support that is just about all he has to go on. The loud clamor that arose for the candidacy of Mr. Davis came almost exclusively from Mr. Davis himself. In nine years at Washington Mr. Davis has failed to achieve much distinction beyond the fact that he worked up from the comparatively lowly estate of an iron puddler. He will depend heavily on support from organized labor. It is not on record that organized labor ever became ecstatic over him.

But Davis is the beneficiary of a distinct feeling among a large faction that he will be as harmless in the Senate as he has been in the Department of Labor. On the other hand, this faction believes that Grundy is nothing short of a public menace. As a hater of organized labor, as a sower of woman voters, as an implacable foe of humanitarian legislation and as the king of tariff grabbers, Grundy probably has become the object of more accumulated hate, in Pennsylvania and out, than any other senator up for election since the war.

Seldom do two men possessed of such restricted personal popularity contest for such an important office in a great state. The explanation is that Grundy apparently has become the most powerful figure in Pennsylvania politics and knows that by winning this fight he can become the state's undisputed political boss. He represents Pennsylvania's great manufacturing interests and a great deal of other Pennsylvania money. Davis simply represents the opposition to Grundy, of which there is so much.

All bets here now are that Davis will remain in the cabinet through the primary campaign. He is still there, because Mr. Hoover had such a hard time finding a sufficiently conservative Republican to take his place who would have the support of the labor unions. As long as he remains his supporters can be expected to advertise him as the "Hoover candidate" in the primary. Attempts doubtless will be made to get Hoover to nudge him out, but the president has no conceivable reason to help Grundy—who has criticized him and who has supported sky-high tariff rates calculated to embarrass him. Furthermore, Mr. Hoover himself stayed in as secretary of commerce when he ran for the presidential nomination.

Menu For the Family

BY SISTER MARY
NEA Service Writer

AS LONG as the potato is at its best, the typical American family regards it as a dinner necessity. But when potatoes become scarce and of poor quality, there are many vegetables and cereals that are its just competitors. Different varieties of dried beans, peas and lentils, hominy, rice, macaroni and spaghetti may be served in palatable dishes that will find special favor on potato-less menus.

In planning a meal in which rice, macaroni or spaghetti is used in place of potatoes, keep in mind the necessity of increasing the iron content of other foods.

If beans or lentils replace potatoes, they also may figure as the main dish, although then an extra amount of milk should be introduced into the menu.

Variety to Choose From

There are many varieties of dried beans that are more delicately flavored than the "navy" bean usually called to mind when beans are mentioned. Dried lima beans, marrowfat, red kidney beans, dolicho, yellow eye, cranberry and black are excellent varieties, each having a distinguishing flavor.

must be soaked much longer than the other varieties and then simmered at the lowest possible temperature for a day. With careful stirring to prevent crushing them the beans will emerge all in whole, their interiors creamy white and meaty.

Chili con carne is a combination of rice and meat that is a whole meal in itself with the addition of a salad.

Chili Con Carne

One cup red kidney beans, 1 pound lean beef, 1 tablespoon fat, 1 onion, 1-2 cup canned tomato, 4 chili peppers, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 bay leaf, 2 slices breakfast bacon. Soak beans a day and night. Drain and cook in 4 cups water to which the bay leaf and bacon have been added. Melt fat and add meat cut in inch cubes. Add onion and brown meat and onion. Add tomatoes and water to cover. Add salt and cook until meat is tender. Remove bacon from beans and add beans to meat. Add finely chopped chili peppers and simmer half an hour. If the mixture is too thin, thicken with flour stirred to a smooth paste with a little cold water. Let boil five minutes after adding flour.

It is the chili peppers that give distinction to this dish. The amount used must, of course, be determined by the family taste.

HOOKS AND SLIDES

Philadelphia Fixture

NINETEEN years ago a tall, raw-boned college boy hopped a train in South Bend, Ind., rode into Chicago and reported to the Chicago Cubs. He played six years in Chicago and then was traded to the Phillies, where he has been at least a part-time performer ever since. He's 42 years old now.

The player is Fred C. Williams. Cy Williams to everybody who has followed major league baseball in the last 15 years. Only the advent of more youthful slugging talent in Philadelphia has kept Cy from the regular lineup of the Shotton aggregation.

The ancient Phillies star is rich in experiences. He has a distinction which few major league players can boast—he never played a minute on a minor league team, joining the Cubs direct from the Notre Dame campus.

Cy Names Pilot Marvels

HE played under more major league managers than any ballplayer in the business today," said Cy. "I guess he's right, at that, for any guy who spends 12 seasons in the livery of the Phillies has known a few managers."

"Two managers stand out as marvels to me because they had the knack of making men play ball for them," continued Cy. "The first was Pat Moran—a fellow who could put his men on the back and they would wade through hell for him. The other fellow is Huri Shotton."

The present manager of the Phils gets my vote, too. You'll have to admit that a fellow who can pull the trading strings as he did, patch up here and there and bring a team right up into the "contender" class is doing quite a nifty piece of managing. Altogether he gathered his chatters at a cost that would astound the fans, were they granted a peek into the books. What he could have done with a Ruppert bank-roll can only be a matter of guesswork.

Only 44 per cent of male students in Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Tex., use tobacco a survey found.

Cubs Most Contented Ball Club; Won Penant But None Held Out

SANTA CATALINA ISLAND, April 1.—(AP)—Willag Wrigley, Jr., believes he has in the Chicago Cubs, the happiest family of ball players the national games ever knew.

"Do you know every major league ball player wants to play with the Cubs?" he asked, as he watched them work out here.

"They know we aren't exactly running the club to see how much money we can make. They know we'll pay good salaries, sometimes bigger than their ability warrants, and they know they'll get better than an even break from Joe McCarthy, the manager, and the rest of us."

Holdouts usually are frequent among pennant winners but not a Cub turned back the first 1930 contract offered him. A good reason: virtually all were given substantial raises.

Three of the happiest members of the team are Rogers Hornsby, Lester Bell and Zack Taylor, who were sold down the river to Boston before Wrigley bought them.

"Foy years! I've wanted to play with the Cubs," said Hornsby. "In fact I started the ball rolling which sent me to the Cubs from the Braves. I showed Judge Fuchs how he could improve the Braves by selling me for cash and players, and it was a good deal all around."

Restrictions on the club are few. Every man is permitted to follow virtually his own line of department, and few need disciplinary action by McCarthy, who, however, is quick to follow his word with action, if that is necessary.

No frills on the package. The extras you get with Camels are in the marvelous quality of the cigarettes themselves.

Camels have won a wider friendship among the millions who appreciate the luxury of a perfect smoke than any other cigarette ever made.

Times Are Altered

MENTION of the Ruppert bank-roll brings to mind the change that has occurred from the time when owners of both New York clubs could buy up any and every seasoned performer or good-looking piece of baseball ivory. Now they have to huddle and squabble and carry on much in the manner of street merchants.

The late Miller Huggins built a great ball team with such strong as Ruth, Scott, Penneck, Hoyt, Schang and some others, all purchased from the Boston Red Sox.

John McGraw had great teams when all he had to do was plunk down a few thousands for a Dave Bancroft or an Art Nehf.

Only 44 per cent of male students in Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Tex., use tobacco a survey found.

The Presbyterian Theological seminary in Chicago will celebrate its 100th anniversary this fall.

"Is anything known against him?" asked the judge.

"He has never appeared at this court before," was the answer, "but there are nine previous convictions for speeding against him spread over a number of years."

The comfortably fitting back lace corset we show here is made of strong rayon brocade. The elastic bands, at the top in front, and at the lower back, allow perfect freedom—in any position. The back is well built up for perfect support and control—and the garment is well boned throughout. In adjusting a back lace corset, DON'T tie the laces around the waist—but, after the garment is adjusted, tie them in back, and the silhouette of fashion is yours.

"Annie Christie" Is Story of Regeneration

Eugene O'Neill, Clarence Brown and an audible Greta Garbo are the triumvirate responsible for the unqualified success of "Annie Christie," which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer presents Wednesday and Thursday at the Saenger theatre.

In adapting the celebrated play to the talking screen, Frances Marion, scenarist, retained O'Neill's dialogue and directions almost in entirety, thus keeping the picture in the mood of the original stage play. Brown also remained faithful to O'Neill's viewpoint so far as was logical in the greater proportioned screen interpretation. As for Garbo, it is difficult to picture any other individual in the role of the pathetic, neurotic Anna than this tensely emotional Swedish actress whose very nativity corresponds to that of the story's heroine. Even her voice with the slight Swedish accent is perfectly suited to the role.

A good deal of room at the top is made by gentlemen who have gone to sleep there and fallen off.

TRICKY

The villagers, listening to a show band, understood everything except the trombone, so they asked the opinion of the oldest settled. He watched the player a while and exclaimed: "Don't notice him, there's a trick in it; he ain't really swallering it."
